

MINNEAPOLIS A CROWDED CITY

Thousands Of Visitors Are Pouring Into It's Confines To Attend Great Reunion.

SPECIAL TRAINS ON ALL THE ROADS

Real Business Of The Week Will Very Probably Begin Tomorrow Morning--Headquarters Have Been Opened.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 13.—With her streets and buildings almost hidden from view by tens of thousands of flags and countless yards of red, white and blue bunting, Minneapolis today threw her gates wide open and gave a hearty welcome to the veterans and other visitors to the fortieth annual national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the meetings of the affiliated organizations.
Receptions and reunions marked the opening day. It was a day of preparation for the many interesting features to come during the week. Regular and special trains arrived at reception and entertainment. The hotels and boarding houses are crowded and many private homes have been thrown open for the accommodation of the visitors. The crowd promises to be unusually large, but the arrangements are ample and every visitor is assured of a place to sleep and plenty to eat while in the city.
State Headquarters
Various state headquarters were opened today in the hotels and the patriotic and other societies are keeping open house for the veterans and their friends. One of the features of the social program was a brilliant reception given at the residence of Mrs. H. F. Kimball this afternoon in honor of the visiting Daughters of the American Revolution. Headquarters were opened during the day by the Ladies of the G. A. R., the Women's Relief Corps, and other organizations that are to hold their conventions during the week.
National Offices
The national G. A. R. headquarters at the West hotel presented a lively appearance. Commander-in-Chief Tanner and his official staff were busy completing the details of the program and putting the finishing touches to the reports to be presented to the encampment. The arrival today of the official Kansas delegation gave an impetus to the boom of Commander Coney of that state for the office of commander-in-chief to succeed Commander Tanner. Meanwhile the short intervals at the union station and each deposited its quota of veterans. Forty thousand is now regarded as a conservative estimate of the number of strangers who will be in the city this week. The old soldiers received enthusiastic welcome from their comrades of the Twin Cities. Each arriving train was met at the depot by members of the reception committee and escorted to quarters. The visitors are loud in their praise of the arrangements made for their friends of Commander Brown of Ohio, who is a candidate for the same office, are not visible and are conducting a lively button-hole campaign in behalf of their favorite. The candidacy of Comrade Burton of Missouri is also in evidence and all signs point to one of the liveliest contests the organization has seen in a number of years.

The conditions of newspaper workers have been improved, and wages have been materially increased in many instances. With agreement in effect with nearly all of the important newspapers of the North American continent, with forty thousand members now on an eight-hour basis, and with reasonable prospect for complete victory for the eight-hour day in all instances where strikes are now on, the outlook for the future of the International Typographical union is exceedingly bright."

THE REV. TIPPETT'S SERMON

At Carill Methodist Church Yesterday Dealt with the Joyfulness of Right Living.

Rev. J. H. Tippett, pastor of the Carill Methodist Church, yesterday for the text of yesterday's sermon, Colossians first chapter, ninth to eleventh verses: "For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing; being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God; strengthened with His might according to His glorious power, unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness." On this theme, the manifoldness of the Christian life, he said in part:

There is no better index to character than the real prayer of the man.
Show me, or tell me, what a man prays for in his heart and I will tell you what kind of a man he is. This prayer is characterized by breadth, intensity and spiritual fervor. The first petition is "manifold wisdom and understanding." There is a longing need in the soul to know God. One group of Christians finds itself surrounded in one way or another by Christian duty and another Christian finds himself surrounded by another problem of Christian duty; and the petition of the apostle is that they may be blessed with every kind and manifold, spiritual wisdom and insight.

Christianity involves the exercise of our faculties with each new duty and each new problem as it presents itself to us. There is one duty which a man owes to the State as a citizen.
There is one kind of wisdom required for citizenship. Another is required for one's social relations. Oh, the wisdom which Christian women may exert in social life, to purify it, to exalt it, to sweeten it, for woman is always the queen of social life.

There is one kind of wisdom required in business relations. How shall I discharge my duties as a man of business faithfully to my Lord and Master? There is another duty that a man owes to the great cause of missions. What is my duty to the great cause of Missions and of evangelization? And then there is the wisdom required in the nurture of children. I have heard Christian mothers say that it requires nearly every kind of wisdom to train up a family of a half-dozen children in the way they should go, because no two of them are just alike; and that is true. There is a kind of Christianity different from that which looks upon Christian duty simply as an observance of rites and ceremonies and forms.
The Mohammedan repeats his prayers five times a day and consider that he has discharged his duty in a religious way. He would look at religion as a straightedge which one may lay down upon a smooth plane, and which would enable him with a pencil to draw a straight mark of ceremonial observance merely.

But Christianity is not so simple as that. It is rather like the running of a line around a piece of land with a compass, as a surveyor does. First, there is a junction in this direction, and then a junction in that direction, and then a junction in the other. The angle of observation changes at each recurring moment. Christianity is a principle, not a rule. There is a conception of the Christian life which needs to be corrected. People who conceive Christianity emphasize it at the beginning and the end, and all that comes between is the result of the action of a spiritual dynamic, which has been planted in them. It cannot be said that there is a physical salvation, that there is a power implanted in a life at conversion like the explosion in a cannon, and that the believer is borne as a physical weight safely into the Kingdom of God by and bye.

The Christian Life may be likened to the flight of a bird. It is led to flight by its inward impulse. It hovers there in mid-air; it drops heavily to the earth; it spreads its wings out and recovers itself and then soars at a new angle, and the slightest change in the force or in the direction of the wind requires on its part a new adjustment.

Spiritual life has two hemispheres.
One has a relationship to its fellow-men, and the other has a relationship to God. The man who loves God intelligently will love his fellow-men, and the man who loves his fellow-men intelligently will love God. Perhaps we may sum up the whole spiritual life just as I said it should be in these two petitions by a simple illustration. A child will hold a mirror so the sun's rays will reflect from it to the face of some playmate and so in that twofold adjustment, first,
to the sun and then to the face of the playmate, we have an example of the spiritual life. "First, there is an adjustment of the life to God—the Sun, to Jesus Christ, the Sun of Salvation, the Sun of Righteousness; the life guided always by prayer and meditation and earnestness of purpose to relationship and adjustment with Him; the still life, the earnest life of submission to His will, the consciousness that He is with us, and that His power and help are ours;
and then, without thrusting our spiritual profession into the faces of others as the children do with the mirror, but nevertheless reflecting the light, we go forth with the image of the Sun of Righteousness reflected in us, that as men see us they may see the light and the glory of Christ the Sun.

It is very singular that over a hundred years ago, covering the same general period, there were a number of great movements. There was a wave of sympathy for the prisoners in the prisons of Europe, and John Howard was raised up as an apostle of prison reform. At about the same time Wilberforce was raised up as an apostle of emancipation when there came a new wave of sympathy for the slaves scattered all over the earth.
Robert Rake began the movement which at length resulted in the great modern Sunday school enterprise.
John Wesley and George Whitefield and others were raised up to proclaim the Gospel of God's grace everywhere. This all illustrates this text, that manifold fruit-bearing is the natural outcome of life in Jesus and that when Jesus enters the heart and plants the seed of life there life will bloom in all directions.

There are people who are spiritually untuned corks. They are strong on one side of their character and in one relation to God, but weak on the other side and in another relation. Some people are strong enough so long as they remain surrounded by the accustomed influences, but when on a vacation they are because of a new environment. Some people are strong like a tree which has had one side washed away by the water.

If I mistake not patience is very nearly the crown of the Christian life.
We need patience every day in the little things; irritations and worries of life. Character is tested more by little things than by the great things.
Patience takes the fruit of affliction and says, "I will eat it because I must, but I do not like it." Long suffering says, "I will take it, but it is tasteless, it is insipid. I do not like the taste of it." Joyfulness eats the fruit of affliction and says, "It is sweet." That is what the grace of God can do. It can put a savor and a sweetness into it all.

on that of the previous year.

A charter has been granted in Georgia to the Augusta & Northwestern Railroad company, which will construct and operate a railroad from Augusta to Athens, a distance of ninety miles. The road will form an important connecting traffic link between the Southern Railway and the Central railway of Georgia, at Augusta and Athens.

The foreign trade of Canada for the year ending June 30 last was $552,000,000, an increase of nearly $82,000,000 over the previous year.

It is said to be the plan of the Southern Pacific Railroad company to establish a new steamship line between New York, Havana and New Orleans. It is reported that three battleships intended for the new service are now under construction at Philadelphia.

The engineering departments of the railroads in Mexico report that there is a scarcity of good civil engineers in that country for service in the surveying of new lines, the extensions of existing systems and in the actual construction work.

Under the direction of the lobster hatchery in Boothbay harbor, there have been planted along the Maine coast this season the enormous total of 270,000 young lobsters and 170,000 codfish.

According to official announcement,
the Chicago & North-Western railroad has abandoned the idea of extending the line to Sioux City.

afternoon. The contest was devoid of sensational features and would prob-

fourth inning been caught by Right

GREATER THAN EVER.
Ringling Bros.' World's Greatest
Shows Will Exhibit at Janesville
Friday, August 31.

This world-famous circus firm, always modern and progressive, has had for years the biggest and best show on earth, which fact, however, has not deterred them from going in to further enormous expense for this season by the addition of new cars, hundreds of horses, gorgeous parade features, imported ring novelties and even entirely new shows. The crowning novelty this year is the stupendous spectacular production of "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," interpreted by 1,200 characters. The costumes of the spectacle are historically correct and radiantly colorful.
There are 2,500 designs of the picturesque styles belonging to the days when knights' errantry was in flower.
The scenic accessories of this production are carried in an extra special train of fifteen cars, and the lighting effects of the theatre are used for the first time under canvas to give the charm of atmosphere to the swiftly changing incidents and picturesque scenes. The tent of the circus is the largest ever made, and is brilliantly lighted by electricity. This feature is in keeping with the progressive spirit that has always characterized Ringling Brothers' great circus. The monster street parade, always a fascinating attraction with Ringling Brothers' shows, has been enlarged and is now a glittering pageant more than three miles long.
The band chorals and musical vehicles are massive structures, gracefully fashioned and beautifully colored. The animal cages and dens are newly built and of differing showy patterns, which relieve this procession from the deadly monotony of the familiar circus. Elaborately carved and richly decorated tableau wagons bear character types of the great nations of the world, and cavalry troops, equipped for service, illustrate the army dress and national pride of all countries. A division of Lilliputian cages for children's delight, forty elephants, the largest herd in captivity, twenty camels and hundreds of high-strung horses of blue-blooded origin, scores of open wild animal dens and fifty clowns for rollicking fun—and other captivating features in the remarkable free street display. In the ring performances Ringling Brothers introduce 375 performers and more than 100 sensational acts. Many of the artists appear in America for the first time, and all stand at the head of their class.

PLAIN FACTS

The Elkhorn Independent asks the following question: "But would the Philippine bill take thousands of dollars from the pockets of the farmers of the first district, or even those of the sugar beet tobacco section of it?"

In reply to this the Gazette reprints the following editorial from the Broadhead Independent, which fully takes up this interesting phase of the question:

"There is an attempt to defend Mr. Cooper's position in relation to the Philippine tariff bill and the Cuban reciprocity treaty is cited. In reply to this it is sufficient to say that Cuban tobacco is not, nor never will be, a competitor of Wisconsin leaf, while the Philippine tobacco would have been if Mr. Cooper's efforts were successful. The tobacco and the sugar trusts lobbied for the passage of this bill.

"This is a matter of record. The growers of tobacco and of sugar beets and the independent sugar manufacturers were against its passage, for reasons that have been stated fully many a time. Chief among these is that up to the time of the introduction of this bill all the Philippine sugar and tobacco plantations were owned by Spaniards and Spanish corporations. Labor was and is abundant at from eight cents to sixteen cents a day. Tobacco can be grown there at a profit at two and one-half cents a pound. The freight rates from Manila or any seaport in the Philippines are less than they are from any point in Wisconsin to New York. There is no guaranty that labor conditions would be improved by this reduction in the tariff. The only ones it would benefit would be the Spaniards and the Spanish corporations, and the sugar and tobacco trusts, giving the Philippine growers a more extensive market, and the trusts a larger supply to draw from. It is worthy of note that immediately upon the introduction of this bill in congress the American Cigar company, one of the largest trusts in the world, formed another corporation with $100,000,000 capital and purchased over 100,000 acres of land suitable for growing tobacco in the Philippines.

"About one-third of the tobacco grown in the United States is raised in the state of Wisconsin. Naturally, we should be interested in any legislation which might affect the price of tobacco. We are also interested in the price of sugar as the beet sugar industry is rapidly becoming a prominent one in the state. Mr. Cooper, however, ignored all these things and notwithstanding the strongest kind of protest from the district voted in favor of reduction of the tariff.

Only one Wisconsin representative voted for him. Senators La Follette and Spooner were opposed to the bill. We may be mistaken about it, but we cannot help but feel that Mr. Cooper's allegiance was due to the people of his district and not to the Philippine planters. One of the reasons he gives for voting for this bill is that Secretary Taft recommended it. This argument had no influence with our senators or with the other congressmen from Wisconsin, aside from Messrs. Cooper and Esch. If Mr. Cooper is anxious to get after the trusts why doesn't he begin on the steel industry, for instance? Why does he start his work for the common people by slicing off about the only protection that is accorded the American farmer? When a man has grown away from his constituents to such an extent that he heads the importunities of the Spanish planters and corporations in the Philippines and refuses to listen to the people who have made him, it is time that he be supplanted by someone else."

IS STILL SLEEPING.

So anxious to support Congressman Cooper is the Monroe Sentinel that it has closed its eyes to facts and forgets what has or has not transpired in national affairs as to print the following:

"Notwithstanding the reduced tariff on Philippine tobacco, advocated by Congressman Cooper, the offers for the Wisconsin crop and all old tobacco are the highest they have been for years."

For the benefit of the sleepy editor of the Sentinel, the information is given the Philippine Bill did not become a law; that out of the Wisconsin representation in congress but two voted for it—Cooper and Esch—and that the senate which includes both Senator La Follette and Senator Spooner practically shelved it. It is for this reason that the bill did not become a law and Wisconsin tobacco is at a premium. If it had, and it was no fault of Cooper it did not, the tobacco would be a drug on the market. Anxiety to support a man who lives in the district but a few weeks a year and who represents the Malay population of the Philippine islands rather than the farmers and manufacturers of his district often leads some people into serious errors.

Members of the council committee on parks appear to resent the idea that the people have any rights as to how the park shall be decorated. The project of placing advertising benches in the court was so seriously considered that a certain gentleman, who furnishes them, was approached and according to one member of the committee promised to supply them. This pennywise policy of the council committee is absurd, in keeping with other moves of similar nature where certain members try to save in one locality and spend rashly in another. If the committee can not afford to have decent benches placed in the park then use those planks from the Jackson street bridge and have rustic seats made.

When Senator La Follette tells the voters of Janesville they should vote for Lenroot next Saturday he will have transcended his own preachings and done what he objected to in others doing when he made the primary law—diverting the will of the people by federal interference.

"Janesville is alive to all industries that want to come to help develop the natural trade center of Southern Wisconsin: A lightning rod factory is the latest and possibly the rods may attract more factory owners who are touring the country seeking locations.

Johnny Nelson won out in the second congressional election for delegates to the special district convention Saturday, but his margin was so narrow it may be changed when the real fight at the primary comes in September.

Frank Hall and Ex-Governor Hoard, former strong henchmen of the Senator, have come out in the open for Davidson as opposed to their former friend's advice and feeling in the matter. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

The second ward residents want to know where their drinking fountain is. Numerous aldermen have promised it to them and Alderman Baumann really got an order through the council, but where is the fountain?

If Sawyer County decides to run John Dietz for sheriff they can rest assured he will make a good one and evildoers will seek other climates than the tall timber.

Local politicians are trying to figure out the whys and wherefores of the different candidates for county offices chances.

It would not be surprising to note a few changes in the make-up of the Wisconsin congressional delegation at the next session of congress.

Governor Davidson can still count his friends by the score and the war dogs of the Lenroot camp have been on his trail for a week past.

Chicago has two pennant-winning, pennant-leading baseball teams, and in consequence the city has gone baseball mad.

PRESS COMMENT.

Candid Opinion of One.

Rockford Register-Gazette: The blamed old chauntiqua comes along just when the shows at Harlem park are getting good.

Oh, There All Gentlemen.

Racine Journal: Band wagons are being lined up for statesmen and others looking both ways. Be careful how you pick gentlemen.

Terrible Object Lesson.

Sheboygan Journal: W. J. Bryan paid a visit to Pompeii recently and saw what free trade in cinders will do with prosperity.

Only Drainage Engineering.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Janesville has suffered a disastrous flood causing damages estimated at nearly $20,000. And Janesville has no flush boards to blame for it, either.

His Gigantic Bluff.

La Crosse Leader-Press: The editor of the Beloit Daily News, who is for Lenroot, has been able to find only 12 Davidson men in Beloit and he doesn't like the looks of them.

Man—Mere Infinitesimal Worm.

Exchange: Another Chicago university professor has made a bid for fame. He says that in the beginning all life was represented in female form, and that man is merely a parasite.

Shared Pobie's Opinion.

Chicago Record-Herald: Pobie doesn't think it only makes people unhappy to rescue them from ignorance. Some of the officials of the Milwaukee Avenue Bank seem to have held a similar opinion.

Rather Harsh, Aren't You?

El Paso Herald: La Follette is landing out on the Chautauqua circuit all the hard things he thought out against his senatorial associates but omitted to produce on the floor of the senate.

A Disgrace to Family.

Exchange: Charles G. Gates is reported to have lost $12,000 on a horse race at Saratoga. Pa. Gates will be pained at this. Charles should have considered the family's reputation and made it a million.

Wants More Orthodox Hell.

Milwaukee Journal: We don't seem to need the modern "uplift," sugar coated moralizing, just now, quite as much as we do the good, old-fashioned orthodox hell. A whiff of real brimstone preaching is what the atmosphere needs.

Still, the Fittest Survive.

El Paso Herald: It is a doubt on the truth of Darwinism to read the accounts year after year of the fresh crops of rock-boat idiots. In the year 1905 that sort of disposition should have been killed out of the human race. But it isn't.

The Oshkosh Northwestern Editor.

Exchange: Surrounded as he is by the beauty, fashion and wit of the Chilian-capital, it is not altogether remarkable that Ambassador John Hicks should like his job, even though he was obliged to leave "the boys" at Oshkosh to serve his country at the post of duty.

Only Sympathy For His Mother.

Exchange: Mrs. Thaw, Sr., is the only one in the whole troublous Thaw crowd who deserves any sympathy, and if the gilded young man were awaiting trial managed to escape the electric chair it will be, like most of the other escapes from retribution in his life, due to his mother.

Babcock at the Saw.

Green Bay Gazette: Babcock isn't saying much, at least for publication, but it is rumored that he is saving considerable wood in the Third district. He held a meeting of his lieutenants this week in Milwaukee and every one of them was "mum as an oyster" when the newspapers were around.

Don't Be Stamped!

Eau Claire Leader: A woman contributor to the Milwaukee Free Press has taken a bold stand and declared that she is for Lenroot for governor. Now, boys, keep your heads and don't let this circumstance put you in the flimflam column. Stand by your guns and Davidson may yet be saved.

Sympathy vs. Contributions.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The Marshfield Times says a petition has been received in that city, asking for contributions to help John Dietz of Cameron dam fame, in defending his rights against the Mississippi Boom company, but The Times adds that not a single name has yet been placed on the petition. Perhaps it is true, as was claimed, that public sympathy is largely with Dietz, but there seems to be a very fine distinction between plain sympathy and financial contributions.

Phantom View of Madison.

Madison Journal: "Anent the present agitation in Superior it might be interesting for Superior people to know that in the city of Madison the state capitol, all saloons are closed at 12 o'clock Saturday night and remain closed till Sunday at 1 o'clock p. m. when they are open again until night."—Superior Telegram. Madison has been getting so much unsavory advertising of late that it is a pity still regard for the trullie compels the relegation of the above picture to the mirage class.

Newspapers in Wisconsin.

Fond du Lac Bulletin: Wisconsin has something over 500 publications of various kinds, from dailies to annuals. The number of dailies is increasing rapidly. While there have been daily papers in Milwaukee for sixty years or more, it is safe to say that more than half of the dailies now in existence in the state were started during the past twenty years. There are German dailies and a Polish daily. Racine three, Kenosha three, Janesville two, Madison two, La Crosse two, Eau Claire two, Ashland two, Sheboygan two, Manitowoc two, Appleton two, Marinette two, Neenah and Menasha two, Oshkosh one, Fond du Lac three, Portage one, Baraboo one, Watertown two, Beloit two, Stevens Point one, Green Bay two, and Wausau two. These daily papers have done vastly more for their cities than their cities have done for their publishers, and yet many of them are very prosperous publications.

Foolish Faiths of People.

Philadelphia Press: The hopelessness of weaning men and women from foolishness and fanatical beliefs, no matter what examples may be presented to them, is illustrated afresh by the announcement that during the present week twenty-five men and women will sail from a port in Maine to establish a new religion in the holy land. Their boat is an old brigantine, their faith a belief in a "prophet" named Sanford, while their religion is known as the "Religion of the Holy Ghost," or, as the vulgar term them, "Holy Ghosts." Not only their faith but their wealth and their domestic happiness are in the hands of this pretended prophet, who is equipping two other boats to carry his crack-brained followers to Palestine.

Long Ears in Politics.

Evening Wisconsin: The silly Milwaukee Journal published an editorial matter yesterday a long article addressed to Gov. Davidson, urging him not to run, because the stalwarts were back of him and would get him even if he watched out, and the Journal also published as editorial matter in the same issue the following paragraphs:

"There are a whole lot of stalwarts that is a large number in proportion to the small total number, who don't like Davidson a whit better than they like Lenroot."

"The Cameron dam is very noisy these days, but if you want to hear a dam that is eloquent say Davidson to ex-Gov. Scofield."

"When it comes to editorials, the Journal seems ready to print in addition to the usual batch of boilerplate, everything that is handed in. In this instance the paragraphs killed the argument of the longer article, and exposed the Journal's ears, which are of asinine elongation."

Profit, by others, experience, and make use of the want ad columns.

EXAMINATION OF ALL THE SOILS

WHAT THE BUREAU OF SOILS ACCOMPLISHED FOR PUBLIC.

COMPLETE IMPORTANT WORK

Exhaustive Work is Accomplished by the Gentlemen in Charge of his Department.

Washington, D. C., August 8.—The field operations of the Bureau of Soils of the Department of Agriculture during the year 1904 is portrayed in an exhaustive manner in a twelve hundred page bound volume just published. An addenda to the report contains forty-five illustrations showing the locations of the various areas mapped out by the experts of the bureau and also fifty-three large sheet maps of these areas. The volume comprises reports of soil surveys made in Rhode Island, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, North Dakota, Colorado, Utah, Arizona, California and North Carolina, nearly every state in the Union.

This massive volume, is prefaced by a report covering the work in these regions by Prof. Milton Whitney, the chief of the Bureau of Soils. Since the beginning of the work of surveying soils of this country in 1899, over one hundred thousand square miles of the agricultural regions of the United States have been surveyed. Nearly four hundred types of different kinds of soil have been encountered and special studies have been made not only of the soils adapted to the growing of the cereal crops, but also of those special-purpose soils which have a high value for the production of fruit of various kinds of truck or market-garden crops, of the different varieties of tobacco, or sugar beets and of many newly introduced crops.

Speaking of the work on tobacco, Prof. Whitney says:

"The work of the Bureau of Soils has been particularly effective in connection with the study of the tobacco crop of the United States. It has been shown by the work of the soil survey that the characteristics of the tobacco leaf produced depend to a great extent upon the character of the soil upon which the crop is grown. For example, the fine, silky, flexible leaf desired for use in wrapping cigars is produced to the best advantage upon soils of a sandy character. The bright tobacco of Virginia and the Carolinas are best produced upon soils which have a sandy surface and a heavier sandy loam or loam subsoil. The heavy, gummy, plug filter tobacco are produced upon the stiffest clays and the heaviest loams. Thus the character of the soil largely influences the kind of tobacco which can be grown to advantage in any given area. Following these discoveries, the Division of Tobacco Investigations of the Bureau of Soils has carried on a large amount of work in studying the cultural methods, the character of fertilizer, and the methods of curing and marketing the tobacco crop. All of this work has its foundation in the soil surveys which have preceded it. The generalizations which made a considerable part of this work possible have been reached by careful study of the soils in many widely separated tobacco-producing districts."

"It is becoming more and more evident that the introduction and production of the staple crops, especially those not directly devoted to feeding a food supply, is controlled by accident rather than by system. Thus the highly specialized crop of tobacco is frequently introduced into a new region where it has learned farming in a tobacco-growing district. The person, or sometimes a group of persons, finding the soil and climate similar to those of the old home locality, commences to grow tobacco, and his neighbors, if they learn that he is deriving a profit from the new crop, learn the methods of culture and of curing from him, and thus a new tobacco-producing center is created. This is the story of a number of the northern tobacco-producing areas, and is illustrative of the accidental method by which new crops are frequently introduced."

"The surveys made in the interest of the new tobacco industry in eastern Texas have met with a wide demand, particularly in the case of the Woodville, Paris, Jacksonville and Lufkin areas. The majority of these reports go into the hands of individual farmers, who are anxious to learn whether any of the soil types adapted to the production of this new tobacco are to be found upon their farms."

"Again it is frequently not sufficient to indicate the soil and climatic factors alone in the introduction of new crops, but following the soil survey work it becomes necessary for the bureau, under its appropriation of tobacco investigations, alkali reclamation, soil fertility study, or soil management work, to follow up the preliminary survey work by actual demonstration of indicated results, so that the points brought out in the reports may be clearly shown in their details to the persons directly affected by the inquiry. For this reason the soil survey work in the arid regions has been followed in several instances by a demonstration of alkali reclamation methods devised and put into execution by the bureau experts. Similarly, the discovery that high grades of cigar filler tobacco could be produced in certain of the Gulf Coast states led to a call for this demonstration, not alone of this fact, but also of the methods by which the crop could be grown, cured and marketed. This condition arose because the tobacco crop was an unfamiliar product to the farmers of the region, and they must learn the details of its production in order to make use of the information previously placed in their hands through the medium of the soil survey reports."

Senator Bacon's Night Trip Across Golf Links.

NEW YELLOW HAT FOR UNCLE JOE

South Carolina's Gift to Speaker Cannon Stirs Up Rank Envy in Illinois Delegation—Joke Played on Representative Vreeland—Congressman Sends Constituent Spade to Plant Free Garden Seed.

General Bates gave a dinner the other night at the Country club, says the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic. Senator Bacon of Georgia was invited. The senator went to the Chevy Chase Golf club by mistake. It was then fifteen minutes to 8 o'clock, and the dinner was set for 8 p. m. Mr. Bacon learned that the Country club could be reached most quickly by cutting across the golf course and fields on foot.

It was dark. He walked out on the golf course. As soon as he got outside the circle of lights of the clubhouse he fell over a bunker. He took another tack and fell over another bunker. Then he ran into a sand trap and for half an hour wandered around the golf course, falling over every bunker there was and over some of them twice.

He came to a barb wire fence, climbed it, tore one leg of his trousers and promptly fell into a water hazard that was not very deep, but that had much mud on the bottom. By this time he was wet, muddy, disheveled. He finally got off the golf course and plunged through two or three marshy fields to the club.

"Is General Bates giving a dinner here?" he asked of a club attendant.

"Yes, sir," said the attendant, looking at the muddy senator suspiciously, "but I do not think he can be disturbed."

Senator Bacon fairly snorted at this. "Tell him Senator Bacon of Georgia is out here," he commanded.

General Bates came out.

"Why, senator," he exclaimed, "what is the matter?"

"Matter," shouted Bacon, "Nothing at all, nothing, of course, nothing, only I have been falling over a series of hills and into valleys out there."

"Come in to dinner," said General Bates soothingly.

"No, sir," said Bacon. "I cannot. I am too muddy. Please let me have a sandwich and I will go home."

Speaker Cannon appeared on the floor of the house the other day after adjournment wearing a brand new tan colored campaign hat, says the St. Louis Republic's Washington representative. It was a very becoming affair, presented to Uncle Joe by Representative Alken of South Carolina, and the speaker was as pleased as a boy with his first pair of red boots. He demonstrated that it could be turned into many shapes and knocked about generally without showing rough usage. Several members of the Illinois delegation were on hand and insisted on trying on the speaker's "bonnet."

"It's a fine hat, Uncle Joe," said Representative Madison after a trying on, "but it's awfully unbecoming."

"Oh," replied the speaker, "you're just mad because you haven't one."

"No, I'm not mad, but I'm Madden."

"That looks like a senatorial hat," volunteered Billy Lorimer. "It's time you were moving."

"I've heard mighty uncomplimentary things about some men over there," replied the sage of Danville in the droll way his friends most like, "and I don't know that I want to move."

Representative Vreeland of New York had up his bill recently prohibiting the stamping of silver or gold articles with false assay marks, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer's Washington correspondent. To illustrate his speech he had a dozen or more of watches, silver spoons, forks, plated wear and articles of jewelry spread out on the top of his desk. Unknown to Mr. Vreeland, Representative McMorran of Michigan ranged on the desk behind him three big oranges in the shape of a pawnbroker's sign.

"What'll you advance on my watch?" asked Mr. Longworth as he walked by and saw the oranges.

"This is no pawnbroker's office," Mr. Vreeland said.

"Then take in your sign," Mr. Longworth advised.

As Elliott Woods, the superintendent of the capitol, was walking with Uncle Joe Cannon from the street cars to the capitol the other day Mr. Woods noticed several pairs of crows that were building their nests up in the eavings of the columns around the dome, says the New York World's Washington representative.

He pointed them out to Uncle Joe and remarked: "I think those crows are getting too familiar. I will send a man up there and drive them out."

"Oh, no; let them alone," said the speaker, gazing interestedly at the intruders, that were cawing to one another. "We must concede something to our Democratic brethren."

Representative Dickson of Illinois is a close friend of the Democratic state attorney of Pareto county, in his district. So Mr. Dickson included this official in his list when sending out the garden seed which congressmen distribute annually. He received by return mail this:

Dear Dickson—I got the garden seed and am much obliged. Would you not please send me a spade so that I may dig my garden and plant the seed?"

Mr. Dickson, to complete the joke, visited a hardware store, bought a spade and expressed it to his friend.

Yessir, I come from North Carolina.

"Ah, the sapphire country?"

"Well, I dunno. It's more of a rhinestone neighborhood where I hang out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

OWES HER LIFE TO GEORGE HANS

STELLA FORSELL OF ROCKFORD RESCUED YESTERDAY.

DESTRUCTION OF ROW-BOAT

By Paddle-Wheels of Ferry and Almost Miraculous Saving of the Occupants' Lives Witnessed by Hundreds.

Rumors that a Janesville cat had been drowned in a rowboat catastrophe at Rockford were brought back by the seven hundred excursionists from this city who visited Harlem Park yesterday. George J. Hans, secretary of the Marzluft Shoe Co., who effected the rescue of one young woman, was unable to learn her identity or whether or not her companion was recovered in time to save her life. The Gazette was informed by the Rockford Register-Gazette by telephone this afternoon that the names of the occupants of the rowboat were Stella and Eddie Forsell and Hilda Pearson and that the last named, after her rescuers had worked over her for some time, revived and has apparently suffered no serious consequences.

Crushed by Paddle Wheels. About seven o'clock the little craft with its three occupants was cruising about in the vicinity of the ferryboat when one of two male "fooks" in another rowboat thrust out an oar and gave it a shove in the direction of the steamboat. A moment later its bow was caught by the partially exposed paddle-wheel and broken off while the body of the boat described a complete somersault, throwing two of the occupants up against the ferry and the third out into the swiftly moving stream. The young boy, Eddie Forsell, received a glancing blow on the head from the paddle-wheel but was rescued in short order. His seventeen-year-old sister sank and had about been given up for lost when George Hans, appearing over the rail, saw something that resembled a blue dress coming up from the depths. He gave a quick command to a neighbor to hold onto him and let himself down to the water's edge just in time to grasp a hand that fluttered for a moment above the surface. Other passengers came quickly to aid him and the young girl was lifted onto the deck and given the necessary care with all possible haste.

Drifted Way Down River. Meanwhile the other girl, Hilda Pearson, had been carried over a hundred feet downstream by the swift moving current, appearing on the surface a couple of times and then disappearing apparently for good. Some men in a rowboat, however, had caught sight of her and had succeeded in getting hold of and lifting her into the boat. Many were persuaded that she was dead, but signs of life rewarded the workers after they had labored to resuscitate her for some time. In the opinion of the Janesville excursionists the Rockford ferryboat owners should be compelled to protect the paddle-wheels with an ample covering. With such precautions there would be no recurrence of such accidents as that of yesterday. It was reported that another rowboat with two men aboard met with a similar accident yesterday, but they are reported to have been rescued and no particulars could be learned.

DUKE OF DEVIL-MAY-CARE

CHAPTER I.

THE DUKE.

Serene September night, sparkled on the diamond-studded Mississippi—a gliding, bordered with stars, which belted the somber continent.

Two columns of smoke uprose above the trees, a monster's growling came, the dash of paddles. A blinding glare flashed round the bend, then straight down the quiet stretch of river there shot one dazzling shaft of light.

The steamer Sultana moved arrogantly through the silence. On her lower decks a group of "rousters" amused themselves between the landings.

The whistle blew. The mate shouted: "Here, Snowball, get your head-line ready."

The black man dropped his banjo, took up a hawser, and prepared to spring ashore at Devil-May-Care plantation.

Three ladies sat upon the forward guards of the Sultana. Mrs. Ashton, of Ivanhoe, was a slender, alert woman of 50, with penetrating black eyes, and hair that was just beginning to turn.

By ten years of hard work in managing her own plantation she had demonstrated an ability to take care of herself—and Alice, Alice sat beside her, a timid little blue-eyed echo of everything her mother said.

The girl's fair hair might have been beautiful, but beneath Mrs. Ashton's shadow it lacked sheen and luster, as grass that has grown up colorless in the dark. When she spoke at all it was diffidently, and with a glance at the older woman.

Mrs. Ashton manifested the greatest impatience to reach her landing. The boat, the river, the negroes, all the humdrum incidents of her ordinary route of travel bored her, and she did not fail to show it.

"Hello, cap'n, thought I'd go to town with you; take a day off and have some fun. Got a fine piece of beer; meat there for you; can't you look some for supper?"

"Sire, Noel, sure."

"Say, cap'n, you ought to see Joe Balfour hunt bear. He's got no business foolin' round trying to be a jack-leg lawyer; he's just a natural-born bear-hunter."

Before they got half-way up the stair Duke had raised a laugh at good-natured Joe's expense. Mrs. Ashton caught her girls by the wrists and hurried them off the guards into the cabin, beyond the reach of contamination.

"All right," Duke called as he threw open the front door, "come on, everybody, let's have something." He gathered the captain, mates, two clerks, several drummers and a stranger or two—every human creature was his friend when he went to town to have a little fun.

There was a tinkle of ice, an aroma of mint, a crushing of sugar, and a straining of cocktails; then a dozen arms were lifted in perfect grace and unison. "Here's hopin'," they all said, and in a moment set their glasses down again.

"They stood around the bar and talked," Duke related some of Joe Balfour's exploits in the cane-brake, and made him out a mighty hunter before the Lord.

"Here, boys, it's jes' as cheap to set down," Capt. Graham pointed to a big round table, with eight chairs.

Duke ran his hand over the clean white cloth and smiled. "Never been played on?" Let's christen it, boys. What do you say?"

The boys didn't say much; they simply drew up their chairs.

Capt. Graham rapped on the table. "Jerry, dish out the chips; we're burning daylight here."

Jerry came from behind the bar and placed a patriotic stack of chips in front of each man.

"Two and a half limit," he explained; "blues five, reds two; and a half, whites a quarter."

Joe settled comfortably in his chair. "Noel," he said, "I thought you'd quit playing poker."

Duke smiled blandly. "I have; I've quit more'n a thousand times, every time the game breaks up. Shucks, boy, it's dead easy to quit playing poker. But I must have a little sport when I go to town—that don't count. I've got to tear down the gates and take the brides off for a day or so; my system needs it. Look here, Joe, do you think I could sit here and watch you fellows play poker? Could a duck sit on the side of a puddle and watch the other ducks splashing around? Not much."

He picked up the first hand that was dealt him, and skinned it cautiously. "Now, this is what I call living," he said.

"His father chanted your Uncle John out of the nomination for congress. Beat him by a low political trick. Of course, I never look at him, but he has the effrontery to bow whenever he meets me as friendly as you please. Makes me so mad I wait to hit him."

Mrs. Ashton more than half suspected Duke of smiling at her wrath, a suspicion that always upset her Presbyterian fortitude.

"Hi, there! Get a move on you," the mate shouted. "Hustle that cotton aboard, and don't be all night about it." Bale after bale came tumbling down the stage-plank, and was tiered up on deck quicker than a child could build a house of blocks.

Then Duke nodded to one of his negroes: "All right, Chalky, put him aboard."

"Two negroes bent over and lifted a limp black body from the ground; at first the thing frightened Anita; she thought it must be a dead man."

"Bear," said Mrs. Ashton; "that's all the fellow is good for; he does kill out the bears."

The bell sounded; the Sultana was ready to leave. The Duke of Devil-May-Care turned and went back to his horse.

"Hold the boat a minute, Matthews," he called to the mate.

"All right, Mr. Duke, whenever you are ready."

The Sultana waited. Mrs. Ashton turned. "Everybody lets him have his way," she muttered, angrily; "no wonder he's such a fool."

After some moments' conversation with his negroes, Duke turned back leisurely and crossed the stage-plank. Snowball cast off the head-line, scrambled aboard and the boat backed out.

"How's your grace to-night?" Bluff old Capt. Graham smiled and took off his hat in mock humility.

"Hello, cap'n, thought I'd go to town with you; take a day off and have some fun. Got a fine piece of beer; meat there for you; can't you look some for supper?"

"Sire, Noel, sure."

"Say, cap'n, you ought to see Joe Balfour hunt bear. He's got no business foolin' round trying to be a jack-leg lawyer; he's just a natural-born bear-hunter."

Mrs. Ashton more than half suspected Duke of smiling at her wrath, a suspicion that always upset her Presbyterian fortitude.

"Hi, there! Get a move on you," the mate shouted. "Hustle that cotton aboard, and don't be all night about it." Bale after bale came tumbling down the stage-plank, and was tiered up on deck quicker than a child could build a house of blocks.

It must have been nearly ten o'clock at night when the boat whistled for Ivanhoe. From where Joe sat he could see down the long cabin, and noted that there were ladies in the rear. As the ladies rose and came toward the front he recognized Mrs. Ashton. He laid down his hand and slipped away from the table. "Here come Mrs. Ashton and her daughter," he whispered.

Duke kept his seat. "Can't help it," he answered. "I'm loser. She thinks I'm a sprig of Satan anyhow, and it doesn't matter."

"I'm her lawyer," Joe explained in a whisper, "and I don't care to have her see me playing poker."

"All right, Joe, duck and run; you've got a reputation to sustain—and so have I."

Joe Balfour laughed and backed out of a side door into the darkness on the guards.

Mrs. Ashton marched through the cabin, so competent to take care of herself that few men would have dared offer to assist. She glanced toward the table, tilted her nose in the air and passed on. Alice tucked her head, and hurried by.

But everything connected with this boat and the new life was of supreme interest to Anita. She caught a side-long glimpse of the men at table, the chips, the scattered cards—and for one hesitating instant she paused to look. Her violet eyes gazed straight into Noel Duke's. The smile was set on his face—the same tolerant smile with which he always met Mrs. Ashton's withering contempt.

But this girl's steady glance made him feel very guilty and very foolish. The cards dropped from his hands; he tried awkwardly to get up. Then he was conscious that her face flushed and she drew her eyes away; he watched her as the gray traveling dress and the heavy coil of black hair vanished through the door. Without looking at the other men, he rose and stepped through another door to the guards.

Joe Balfour had met the ladies at the head of the stair, and was assisting them to the lower deck. When Duke saw them they were waiting for the stage-plank to be run out.

Mrs. Ashton introduced Joe to the dark-haired girl—her voice was very low, but Duke heard it.

"What a hypocrite Joe is," he thought.

He leaned over the rail and watched his friend helping the ladies ashore; the dark-haired girl smiled into Joe's face as he lifted her down from the end of the stage.

"Just as innocent as if he didn't know one card from another," he muttered. "Sanctimonious old devil."

It did not put him in a better humor to see how calmly Joe appropriated the stranger, and with what gallantry he helped them all into their carriage. Now the smiling rascal stood with one foot on the carriage step and talked.

The bell rang. Joe recrossed the stage-plank whistling jauntily, while Duke watched the Ashton carriage drive away toward the clump of trees that surrounded the house at Ivanhoe.

Joe mounted the steps two at a time—a medley of grand opera and self-satisfaction that Duke resented. So he drew back into the shadow and let him pass into the cabin.

The man on the guards sat silent. He only shifted his chair so that he might look back upon the vanishing lights at Ivanhoe. Then the boat swept round a long curve; the river before him lay as dark and deserted as if it had never known the touch of wheel or keel.

Once he got up, walked to the cabin door and looked through the glass. The men were playing; his seat was vacant. He shrugged his shoulders, walked back to the guards and sat down. After awhile the door opened and Joe came out, peering around in the dark.

"Noel! Is that you? I wondered where you'd gone."

"Yes; I saw you just now, reaping the reward of virtue. Who is the young lady?"

Mrs. Ashton's niece, Miss Cameron. She's going to live at Ivanhoe. Her father died about a year ago. Perhaps you remember them, the Camerons lived in Albemarle county near the University of Virginia."

"I used to know a boy named Ferguson Cameron."

"That was her brother."

Duke made no further comment. Joe touched him on the shoulder. "Come on and fill out the game; I'm striking a streak of luck, trying to pull even."

"No," he shook his head. "I don't feel like playing. I'm kind of getting tired of poker."

SEE SERMONS IN STONES.

Scientists Testify to Mutual Sympathy Existing Between Jewels and Persons.

Science has come to the fore to testify that the belief that precious stones have a peculiar sympathy with human character and bearing thereon is no idle superstition. A professor of the Paris conservatory of Arts and Crafts says that the mutual attraction of people and stones is beyond dispute.

He throws cold water on the belief that sapphires can open prison doors or that diamonds make brave men invulnerable. But after three years' experimental observation he maintains that a preference for certain jewels indicates certain temperamental qualities and even characteristic of physiognomy.

For instance, the ruby invariably attracts persons of dark eyes with long eyelashes. The diamond tempts the blue eyed who boast long lashes. And both blonde and brunette alike if of a nervous temperament yearn for emeralds.

Easy-going natures fall under the spell of blue stones.

But more than all these scientific facts is the discovery that the sympathy of the stone is a sure test of its genuineness. No matter how perfect artificial stones may be, even though made from the dust of the real, having undergone an unnatural crystallization they do not possess the subtle sympathetic attraction. When an easy-going woman turns the cold shoulder on a turquoise collar, you may be positive that the turquoise is artificial.

Novelty in Horse Racing.

The Japanese have added a new feature to horse racing, says the New York Tribune. On May 21 a goshuiki rode a mare a mile in 1 minute and 50 seconds. The goshuiki girls are light in weight and, it is said, will make good horsewomen. Japanese men are such notoriously bad riders that the girls may displace the boys as jockeys.

National Department Store.

The national department store extends from sea to sea; it's full of all it can hold. A list of all it has in stock:

Woolen goods from Portland, Maine. To Tampa, Florida, and back to Portland once again.

There's cotton from the southern states. And lace goods, fine. And luscious peaches, velvet pink. And yellow Georgia pine. New Jersey silk and Texas beef. And Minnesota flour.

And cider from Vermont to drink. With apples sweet and sour.

There's California apricots. The best you ever eat. And strawberries from old Cape Cod. And rubies in a casket. And Louisiana sugar cane. And salmon from the lakes. And buckwheat from ten thousand fields. To furnish up with cakes.

There's silver, gold and copper ore. The treasure of the soil. And sapphires from Montana rocks. And Pennsylvania oil. Fresh water pearls of luster fit to decorate a queen.

And from Alaska slacker furs. Of rich and glossy sheen.

From every land across the deep. In crowds they come and buy. For with the goods of Uncle Sam. No other shop can vie.

Beneath the same old starry sign. Our patriotic fathers sold. The nation carries on today. A big department store.

PLANS TO PROTECT COOLIE WORKMEN

SECRETARY OF WAR TO PASS ON AGENTS' CONTRACTS.

WAGE QUESTION PUZZLE

Contractors' Estimates of Cost of Chinese Labor from Fifty Cents to Maximum of One Dollar Per Day.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Care will be taken by the United States government to prevent contractors from doing injustice to the Chinese laborers employed for work on the Panama canal.

The specifications advertising for proposals to supply 2,500 Chinese to the canal commission will stipulate that the secretary of war shall have the privilege of passing on contracts which labor agents make with Chinese who are to be sent to the isthmus. This provision will make it possible for Secretary Taft to prevent discrimination against the coolies by unscrupulous contractors.

Protection for Chinese.

Under this arrangement the United States will know exactly what the Chinese are paid by the labor agents and the Chinese government will be able to afford its subjects protection on the isthmus because of the ease with which this government will be able to regulate the relations between the Chinese laborers and the contractors.

Many contractors are seeking to supply the first 2,500 Chinese for the canal work. Until the specifications for the contracts are published contractors will not be able to give any idea as to the wage they must have for Chinese laborers on the canal zone.

Differ as to Cost.

Some labor agents believe that with the many restrictions the canal commission purposes placing upon contractors it will not be possible to supply the Chinamen at less than one dollar a day. Other agents are of the opinion that the coolies can be supplied for 50 or 60 cents a day with a fair margin of profit to the contractors.

In Jamaica, West Indians are employed under long contracts at prices ranging from 25 cents a day and rations, which cost only a few cents, to 50 cents a day. The restrictions and safeguards thrown about these laborers, however, are very slight, as compared with the restrictions the United States will place upon the Chinese to be employed for canal work.

TAFT TO INSPECT ARMY POSTS

Tour of Middle West in Autumn Planned by Secretary.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Secretary Taft, accompanied by Brig. Gen. Bell, chief of staff, will make a tour of inspection in the middle west early in the autumn for the purpose of studying bridge posts and the changes necessary to assemble troops in larger posts, thus doing away with minor forts.

The itinerary and the exact time for the trip have not been decided upon, but the secretary of war unquestionably will go as far west as Fort A. D. Russell, Wyoming, and probably will visit Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

It is the purpose of Secretary Taft to make a thorough inspection of garrisons which will be the subject of much discussion in congress next winter, when the plans for concentrating the army in fewer centers will be considered.

SCENE IN CHURCH BY WOMAN CRANK

TRIES TO APPEAL TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

SAYS SHE WAS WRONGED

Tells Her Friends There Was to Have Been Double Celebration at the White House When Miss Alice Was Married.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Miss Asa L. Esac, who is summing in Oyster Bay for the purpose of interviewing the president or Mrs. Roosevelt on what she declares is "a matter of life and death," created a scene during the service in Christ's Episcopal church Sunday.

Miss Esac, or Miss Case, as her name is supposed to be, has attended every church service the president has since his arrival here in July. She has climbed Sagamore Hill on foot several times, only to be turned away by the secret service men.

She presented herself early Sunday at the church and took a seat directly behind the pew usually occupied by the Roosevelt family.

Refused to Give Up Seat.

When Usher James Duffy requested her to relinquish this seat she refused. Duffy forcibly removed her to the rear of the church, and Miss Esac says he tore her gown in so doing. For this act she later applied for a warrant for Duffy, but was refused.

In the rear of the church Miss Esac refused to sit down. A secret service agent stood beside her and during the service she made no less than a dozen attempts to get past him. As the president was leaving the church three secret service men surrounded Miss Esac, but she shouted:

Shouted to President.

"Mr. President! Mr. President! President Roosevelt! Won't you speak to me a moment?"

The president turned his head as he passed, but did not pause. Miss Esac says her watch chain was broken in this scuffle with the secret service men and her watch fell to the floor.

The president was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Quentin and Representative and Mrs. Longworth.

Miss Esac has stated to acquaintances she has made while here that she was to have been married in the White House at the time Miss Alice Roosevelt became Mrs. Longworth; that she was to have married a high government official, and that it was this wrong she seeks to redress.

When the president's carriage had departed Miss Esac was allowed to go. It was then she sought a warrant for Duffy. She says she will stay in Oyster Bay until she accomplishes her purpose.

Houston, Tex., Aug. 13.—The flood in the Colorado river which started from the torrential rains in the San Angelo country a week ago, is now reaching the lower valleys and the farmers are making earnest endeavors to save what they can of their crops. Additional rains around Austin make it certain that the flood period will last for at least two weeks, and that the river will leave its banks at many points.

There is much interest among naval officials as to what extent the president will approve the recommendations from the naval academy.

GREAT FEAT OF RUNNER.

Covered Six Hundred Miles in Five Days Over the Roughest Kind of Country.

The Tarahumara, a great tribe of the northern Sierra Madre, are the greatest runners on earth, not in regard to speed but in endurance. They have been known to average 170 miles per day, there is an absolute record that is indisputable of a Tarahumara sent with an important government document that necessitated an immediate answer covering the distance there and back, 600-mile jaunt, in five days, or an average of 120 miles covered in each 24 hours, not counting the time lost while the answer was being prepared, and it must be remembered that this feat was not performed upon a fair road or on an undulating plain. It was over the wildest country that the Sierra Madre affords; up and down paths that the very deer would hardly esteem a trial; the only level ground encountered was the crossing of a deep river. Also, the journey was done on "jinois," a species of popcorn ground down and mixed with water, and the runner carried his camp equipment, a native woven white wool blanket.

In his biography the following story is given from one of his African letters: "An incident highly creditable to Kaffir womanhood occurred just as we reached Mabotsa. The women, as is their custom, were working in the fields, for they hoe, and the men sew. A young man, standing by the edge of the bush, was chatting with them. A lioness sprang on him, and was carrying him off, when one of the women ran after her, caught her by the tail and was dragged for some little distance. Flampered by the man in her mouth and the woman behind her, she slackened her pace, whereupon her assailant straddled over her back and hit her across the nose and head with a heavy short-handled hoe until she dropped her prey and slunk to cover."—Youth's Companion.

Ironing Day

is a dreaded visitation with most housekeepers. The hot, stifling stove, the running to and fro to change irons, the tremendous heat radiated by the irons while in use, are all a drain on a woman's nerves and vitality; and a sick headache is the usual result of such conditions.

An Electric Flat-iron eliminates the stove, does away with the perpetual running to and fro, and it does not radiate any heat.

All the heat is concentrated on the ironing surface, where it should be, to give the best results.

Electric Flat-irons are never too hot nor too cold; an even temperature is always maintained, and there is no constant and bothersome changing of irons.
